Ethical competence: preparing lawyers for substantial client responsibility

Joint session with the Professional Ethics Committee.

Session Co-Chairs

Clark Cunningham Georgia State University College of Law, Atlanta, Georgia, USA

This session will explore how law schools, professional education providers, professional development programmes, law firm managers, and lawyers with special responsibility for promoting ethical compliance can learn to collaborate in producing ethically competent lawyers who are ready to assume major client responsibility.

When lawyers begin to have substantial client responsibility, it is critical that they have proven competence in ethical decision-making (such as identifying and properly resolving ethical issues) and professional judgement (for example, recognising where discretion needs to be exercised in advising and representing clients).

What are current best practices from around the world for training lawyers for such responsibility and assessing their competence? What innovative approaches are possible?

Risks and threats of corruption and the legal profession

Joint session with the IBA Regional Fora.

Session Co-Chairs

Tomas Lindholm Lindholm Wallgren Attorneys Ltd, Helsinki, Finland
Homer E Moyer Jr

This session focuses on the role lawyers play in international corruption, and on how the long-arm jurisdiction of international and extraterritorial legislations applies to their practice. The session will open with the launch of the first IBA-OECD-UNODC Global Report on the Risks and Threats of Corruption and the Legal Profession, presenting the results of a major international survey on the awareness and perceptions of lawyers about international corruption. Then, a roundtable of experts will comment and discuss on the findings of the report, focusing on what lawyers must do to fully comply with anti-corruption laws and standards. The session is highly recommended for all practitioners advising foreign clients in high risk transactions and sectors such as natural resources, pharmaceuticals, technology and infrastructure, as well as bar associations' representatives, corporate counsels, and lawyers advising on white collar crime, compliance and governance issues.

Room 116 & 117, Level 1

Corruption in the oil and gas and extractive industries

Joint session with the Oil and Gas Law Committee.

Session Chair

Homer E Moyer Jr

More than any other industry, the oil and gas and extractive industries have been subject to enforcement actions relating to the US Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and other anti-corruption laws. Consequently, the oil and gas and extractive industries have been pioneers in developing anti-corruption compliance programmes and initiatives to prevent corruption. The panel will discuss corruption risks associated with oil, gas, and mining projects and methods for dealing with those risks.
